A Little About You:

We are looking for a savvy reporter with strong writing skills who will join a virtually assembled team of over 30 reporters and editors, who can help us crank out the kinds of stories that set Yahoo Finance apart from the competition.

On any given day, you might be involved in reporting on the Dow dropping by over 500 points; an errant tweet by Tesla's CEO that moves the price of the company's stock; the shares of a little-known company that suddenly skyrockets by 200+ (hello GameStop), or noteworthy trends identified by Wall Street research analysts.

Responsibilities:

- Manage multiple projects effectively.
- You will be central to the Yahoo Finance mission of providing value-added news that separates us from everyone else.
- Writing breaking news and feature stories on interesting trends in business, finance and the economy.
- Help identify coverage areas that are either underreported, or require additional context.
- Attending team meetings where appropriate helping writers and editors and show producers advance story ideas.
- File crisp, concise and well-balanced stories.
- Do the occasional on-air hit, where appropriate.

Qualifications:

- Approximately 3-7 years of professional work experience.
- Experience in business and finance is strongly preferred, but enthusiasm and cleanly written copy are acceptable substitutes.
- Ability to work on stories independently on tight deadlines.
- Excellent verbal and written communication skills.
- Comfort in a fast-paced, innovative technology environment.
